MUSCLEBABEE FITNESS

7-DAY
QUICK START GUIDE

A simple reset for stronger habits, better structure, and consistent action after 50.

ONE GUIDE. TWO WAYS TO USE IT.

Use this guide whether you train with MuscleBabee in person or follow a personalized program remotely. The fundamentals stay the same: move with purpose, eat with structure, recover well, and track what matters.

THE GOAL

Do not try to transform everything in seven days. Use this week to create momentum, learn your baseline, and build the habits you can repeat for the next 30 days.

For adults 50+ | In-person + virtual friendly

Educational fitness guidance. If you have a medical condition, injury, unexplained symptoms, or have been told to limit exercise, follow the guidance of your healthcare professional before changing your activity or nutrition.

START HERE

How to Use This Guide

Seven days. One focus per day. Keep the actions simple enough to repeat.

YOUR ONLY JOB THIS WEEK

Complete the daily focus, record what happened, and avoid the all-or-nothing mindset. A consistent 80% week beats a perfect two-day burst.

THE 4 QUICK-START RULES

1. Follow your plan first.

If you already have a MuscleBabee program or an in-person training schedule, that plan takes priority over any general example in this guide.

2. Train at your level.

Use movements, loads, and ranges of motion that fit your current ability. Pain is not a goal.

3. Build meals around structure.

Use your assigned nutrition targets when you have them. Otherwise, prioritize protein-rich foods, produce, sensible portions, and consistency.

4. Track trends, not emotions.

One workout, meal, or weigh-in does not define progress. Look for patterns across weeks.

THE 7-DAY FLOW

Day 1 baseline | Day 2 nutrition | Day 3 strength | Day 4 movement

Day 5 preparation | Day 6 recovery | Day 7 review + next 30 days

DAY 1

Know Your Starting Point

Today is about awareness, not judgment.

TODAY'S MISSION

Record a simple baseline and make one clear commitment for the next seven days. You do not need perfect numbers - you need a starting point.

RECORD YOUR BASELINE

Quick Check	Your Starting Point
Body weight (optional)	_____
Waist measurement (optional)	_____
Current daily movement / steps	_____
Current energy: 1-10	_____
Confidence: 1-10	_____

DO THIS TODAY

[ ] Complete a 10-20 minute easy walk or your scheduled workout.

[ ] Drink water consistently through the day.

[ ] Choose tomorrow's workout time before the day ends.

[ ] Write one reason you want to improve your fitness now.

YOUR WHY

Write it plainly: _____

DAY 1 CHECK-IN

What went well today? _____

What will I repeat tomorrow? _____

Focus: Establish the baseline. Do not chase perfection.

DAY 2

Build a Better Plate

Nutrition gets easier when every meal has a simple structure.

TODAY'S MISSION

Make your food choices more predictable. If you already have personalized calorie, macro, or meal targets, follow those targets first.

THE SIMPLE PLATE FRAMEWORK

- Protein-rich food: choose a portion that fits your assigned targets and needs.
- Produce: vegetables and/or fruit.
- Carbohydrate: choose the amount that fits your activity and nutrition plan.
- Healthy fats: use sensible portions.
- Water or another low-calorie beverage for routine hydration.

KEEP IT PRACTICAL

You do not need a "clean" diet. You need a diet you can repeat. Build most meals from familiar foods, keep portions consistent, and use your MuscleBabee nutrition tools or assigned targets when available.

DO THIS TODAY

[ ] Plan your next two meals before hunger makes the decision for you.

[ ] Include a protein-rich food at your main meals unless your healthcare plan says otherwise.

[ ] Add produce to at least two meals.

[ ] Identify one high-calorie habit you can reduce without feeling deprived.

DAY 2 CHECK-IN

What went well today? _____

What will I repeat tomorrow? _____

Focus: Structure beats restriction.

DAY 3

Strength Is the Foundation

After 50, strength training should be purposeful, progressive, and sustainable.

TODAY'S MISSION

Complete your assigned strength workout or an appropriate beginner session. Focus on controlled movement and good form - not exhaustion.

A STRONG SESSION SHOULD COVER

- A lower-body movement such as a squat, sit-to-stand, or leg press variation.
- A push such as a chest press, wall push-up, or machine press.
- A pull such as a row or pulldown variation.
- A hip-dominant movement when appropriate for your program.
- Optional arm, shoulder, calf, core, or conditioning work based on your plan.

TRAINING RULE

Use a load and range of motion you can control. Stop and seek appropriate guidance if you experience sharp pain, chest pain, faintness, unusual shortness of breath, or symptoms that feel unsafe.

DO THIS TODAY

[ ] Complete the workout you were assigned or a safe session appropriate to your level.

[ ] Write down the exercises, sets, reps, and resistance used.

[ ] Finish knowing you could train again - not feeling destroyed.

[ ] Schedule your next strength session.

DAY 3 CHECK-IN

What went well today? _____

What will I repeat tomorrow? _____

Focus: Good form + repeatable effort.

DAY 4

Move More Outside the Workout

Your training session matters. So does what happens during the other 23 hours.

TODAY'S MISSION

Increase normal daily movement without turning the day into another workout.

EASY WAYS TO ADD MOVEMENT

- Take a 5-10 minute walk after one or two meals.
- Park farther away when practical.
- Stand up and move for a few minutes each hour.
- Use stairs when appropriate for your ability.
- Choose a daily step or walking target that is realistic for your current baseline.

DO NOT COPY SOMEONE ELSE'S STEP GOAL

If your current activity is low, adding a manageable amount is progress. Build from your own baseline instead of chasing an arbitrary number.

DO THIS TODAY

[ ] Add one intentional walk or movement break.

[ ] Notice how long you sit without moving.

[ ] Choose a realistic movement target for the next seven days.

[ ] Keep strength training and daily movement separate in your mind: both matter.

DAY 4 CHECK-IN

What went well today? _____

What will I repeat tomorrow? _____

Focus: More movement, less all-or-nothing thinking.

DAY 5

Set Up the Environment

Make the better choice easier before willpower gets involved.

TODAY'S MISSION

Prepare your surroundings for the version of you who is busy, tired, hungry, or distracted.

YOUR 15-MINUTE SETUP

[ ] Put tomorrow's training clothes where you will see them.

[ ] Choose or prepare two easy meals that fit your nutrition plan.

[ ] Keep water visible and easy to access.

[ ] Remove one food or habit trigger from your immediate environment.

[ ] Confirm your next workout time or training appointment.

THE RULE

Do not rely on motivation to make five good decisions every day. Build an environment that makes the next right decision obvious.

YOUR BACKUP PLAN

If my day gets disrupted, my minimum workout/movement option is:

_____

My easiest planned meal option is:

_____

DAY 5 CHECK-IN

What went well today? _____

What will I repeat tomorrow? _____

Focus: Preparation reduces friction.

DAY 6

Recover Like It Matters

Progress happens when training, nutrition, and recovery work together.

TODAY'S MISSION

Treat recovery as part of the program instead of something you do only when you are exhausted.

RECOVERY CHECK

Quick Check	Your Starting Point
Sleep last night	_____
Energy today: 1-10	_____
Muscle soreness: 1-10	_____
Stress today: 1-10	_____

DO THIS TODAY

[ ] Choose a reasonable bedtime and protect it.

[ ] Use a rest day or lighter movement day if your program calls for one.

[ ] Do not "make up" for food by punishing yourself with extra exercise.

[ ] Review how your body responded to this week's training.

[ ] Prepare for tomorrow's final review.

REMEMBER

Being disciplined does not mean training hard every day. It means following the plan - including recovery.

DAY 6 CHECK-IN

What went well today? _____

What will I repeat tomorrow? _____

Focus: Recovery supports consistency.

DAY 7

Review the Week. Build the Next 30 Days.

You are not finished - you are establishing your operating system.

TODAY'S MISSION

Review the week without drama. Keep what worked, adjust what did not, and choose the habits you will carry forward.

WEEK-ONE REVIEW

[ ] I completed the workouts or movement sessions I planned.

[ ] I improved the structure of my meals.

[ ] I paid attention to sleep and recovery.

[ ] I tracked at least one useful progress measure.

[ ] I identified the situations that make consistency harder.

KEEP / CHANGE / START

KEEP - One habit that worked:

_____

CHANGE - One thing I will adjust:

_____

START - One habit I will add:

_____

THE NEXT STEP

The goal for the next 30 days is not to become perfect. It is to make training, nutrition, and recovery predictable enough that progress can compound.

DAY 7 CHECK-IN

What went well today? _____

What will I repeat tomorrow? _____

Focus: Review. Adjust. Repeat.

NEXT 30 DAYS

Choose the Coaching Path That Fits Your Life

The fundamentals are the same. The delivery can be different.

IN-PERSON TRAINING

Best for clients who want scheduled face-to-face sessions, hands-on instruction, real-time form coaching, and the accountability of an appointment.

VIRTUAL FITNESS PROGRAM

Best for clients who want a personalized workout and nutrition plan, use the MuscleBabee dashboard and tools, train on their own schedule, and complete monthly progress check-ins.

THE MUSCLEBABEE STANDARD

- Use a plan built around your starting point and goals.
- Progress gradually instead of chasing extreme short-term results.
- Track the behaviors that drive results.
- Adjust the plan when the evidence says it is time.
- Build a system you can still follow when life gets busy.

READY FOR THE NEXT 30 DAYS?

Choose the MuscleBabee option that fits your schedule: train in person or follow a personalized virtual program. Either way, the mission is the same - become stronger, more consistent, and more capable.

MUSCLEBABEE FITNESS

Strength. Structure. Accountability. Fitness after 50.
